OUR NATIONAL CHAIRMAN

We print elsewhere in today's paper a brief sketch of the Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, Honorable Cordell Hull. Judge Hull is well-known throughout the country as the author of some of the most important legislation enacted by Congress in recent years; notably, the Income Tax Law, declared constitutional and upheld generally by the United States Supreme Court; the Federal Inheritance Tax Law; legislation stabilizing the value of Liberty Bonds; and much of the reconstructive legislation following the World War. He has left an indelible impress on the Federal Statutes of the country, and the nation is deeply indebted to him for his contributions thereto, and his unquestioned influence in shaping the trend of legislation along safe but progressive lines.

No other Democrat in the country, perhaps, could have been selected to head the National Committee, who at once commanded the confidence of the industrial, financial, and business world to such a degree as Judge Hull. His fourteen years in Congress stand out conspicuously as an unassailable record of high character, commanding intellect, and unselfish devotion to duty. From 1912 to 1921, his intimate association with all classes and conditions of business, brought about by his framing and handling many of the most important measures before the country, effectuated a nation-wide esteem and confidence in his surpassing ability and integrity of purpose.

This esteem and this confidence, Judge Hull has brought with him to the Democratic National Committee. Nor is it limited to the Democratic Party. During his memorable career in Congress he possessed the unbounded respect and confidence of Republicans as well as of those of his own party. "Whenever he spoke"—said a Republican congressman prominent in the councils of that faction in the House—"we Republicans all sat up and listened and took heed, for he always held the view that taxation, the tariff and economic legislation generally, were matters that never should be dealt with in a partisan spirit, but should be considered upon a scientific basis for the general welfare of the government and the people alike."

The tribute paid him by the Democratic leaders of the present House, in resolutions passed on the day following his election as Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, recited his patriotism, statesmanship, intimate knowledge of political history, and essential elements of leadership. They closed by saying: "Knowing his personal character, unselfish devotion to his country, and his ability as a leader disclosed during his long service in this House, with confidence in the success of his leadership, we pledge to him, as to our fellow-democrats throughout the nation, our united support."

The Democratic Party is indeed to be congratulated that Cordell Hull consented to make the personal and financial sacrifice involved in his assuming the national leadership. But they feel, to a man, that it means an undivided support and allegiance on the part of the Democracy of the nation, that shall lead to certain victory in 1924.

Foreign Trade Convention

Philadelphia, March 28.—In common with the executives of all the States in the Union, Governor E. Lee Trinkle of Virginia is quick to sense the importance of the Ninth National Foreign Trade Convention in this city, May 10, 11 and 12, to the industrial and agricultural prosperity of America. Responding to the invitation of the local committee of arrangements, Governor Trinkle writes:

"It is with much pleasure I learn that the Ninth National Foreign Trade Convention will be held in Philadelphia and will be devoted to a discussion of the ways and means of promoting American foreign trade.

"There is no more vital question before the American people today than foreign trade. Without a broader market for our goods, production must decline with all the accompanying evils of industrial idleness, low wages, social unrest, and an impaired standard of living. American development is to a large extent dependent on an enlarged demand for American products, which means that the United States must actively compete in the world's markets for a larger share of the world trade.

"With a sufficient volume of business, it will be possible to maintain American standards and realize our national economic aspirations. We must, therefore, of necessity, look to the international markets for a continuation of our national prosperity.

"The Ninth National Foreign Trade Convention can render a most important service to the nation, and I heartily endorse its purposes."

While only four delegates from Virginia were at the Eighth National Foreign Trade Convention at Cleveland in 1921, a much larger attendance is expected at the Philadelphia gathering because of the realization of its direct effect on Virginia's prosperity, agricultural as well as shipping and commercial. Not only national but world wide interest is being taken in the convention, and already delegates are being registered from such far-off places as Johannesburg, South Africa, Manila, Valparaiso, Rio de Janeiro, Barcelona and Naples.

The St. Louis Chamber of Commerce has appointed 33 of the leading manufacturers and business men of that city as delegates. Similar action has been taken by the Los Angeles Chamber and other organizations all along the Pacific coast, in addition to the registration of many individual delegates. Any manufacturer, business man, or any person interested in foreign trade may register.

"Greater prosperity through greater foreign trade" is the convention slogan, while the basic theme will be, "Financing and Expanding Foreign Trade." It will be the greatest gathering of the business men of the United States ever held, and every phase and angle of foreign trade will be discussed by experts, hard-headed, practical men, with a thorough working knowledge of their subjects. Faddists and theorists, and politicians are barred.

Every delegate will have the benefit of the Trade Adviser Service, by which his individual foreign trade problems will be solved, and there will be many other valuable features free to those attending. Philadelphia's hotels are all within easy walking distance of the Academy of Music, where the sessions will be held. Reservations should, however, be made early, as between 4,000 and 5,000 delegates are expected.

WOMEN SHRINK FROM MODESTY

Bear Grievous Pain Rather Than Make Grievous Condition Known

The subject of the complaints peculiar to women is a delicate one, yet it is a duty to all, is pure and noble in Sister, Daughter, Wife and Mother to let them know that most of their derangements are due to a disordered stomach primary to nervous debility. Many a suffering woman influenced by shrinking modesty has, borne this grievous condition rather than make a personal appeal said the Tonnal chemist. When they say I am all run down, so nervous and debilitated, that means that they are victims of this modern malady. Such women, and they are innumerable, in all localities, suffer from headaches, loss of appetite, sleeplessness and depression of spirit, and Tonnal a universal tonic appetizer and strength builder is just what your system requires.

Tonnal which builds up your system creates a healthy appetite, promotes digestion and assimilates with the food you eat, vitalizes the blood, brings back color to the cheeks and the sparkle to the eye.

Tonnal is sold at Edgar Warfield's, Jr., Drug Store, Corner King and Pitt Streets, Alexandria, Va.
